

I feel that cellphones aboard an passenger aircraft in flight are unsafe as they tend to cause irritation among passengers who are forced to listen to several loud conversations goin on around them at one time. I also feel that they may be a help to any negative action going on within the aircraft like a hijack situation--not only between the hijacker but also false information sent to the ground which would cause problems with a system that has been set up for those of us who are crewmembers and that works quite well. I have been a flight attendant for 37 years and feel like the solitude offered to passengers aboard our airplanes is about the only kind they have left and I would hate to see this compromised. Thank you.
